Frank Morin : No Stone Unturned (The Petralist Book 3) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised No Stone Unturned (The Petralist Book 3):

1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. GreAt and unique storyBy ArgentLove the series so far. The world is intriguing and the main character has depth and the system of magic is truly unique1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Best in the series yet!By The guy with an opinion.Loved how it comes along and the multiple plots all twisting and weaving together!Think want I enjoyed most about this is you have a guy with almost unlimited power who finds himself shackled like the rest of us. Good character development and awesome action pull you in at every turn.Looking forward to book 4!1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Great Read. I enjoyed the first two only a ...By CustomerGreat Read. I enjoyed the first two only a bit, and I was on the fence about buying this one and spending the time to read it. I'm very glad I chose to as it blew the first two out of the water.

As student armies clash in intense group battles and Connor struggles to leverage a pitifully underpowered army against overwhelming competition, the intrigue at the Carraig intensifies to deadly new levels. There are secrets at the Carraig buried for centuries that could shake the nation to its roots. Once Connor pokes that hornets' nest, the Tallan's own fury will be unleashed. To survive, Connor must outsmart conniving noble houses, dodge international assassins, survive unbelievably bad poetry, and risk exploring new powers that were concealed for very good reasons. As the conflict escalates and his ultimate enemy steps out of the shadows to strike, Connor must face a threat not seen since the Tallan Wars. Connor's only hope is to embrace the thing he fears the most. And become the ultimate unclaimed.

Frank Morin is a master of the young adult fantasy genre. Midwest Book This is a great YA epic fantasy, one that I would actually pick up and read again as a reader and a fan instead of an editor. Joshua Essoe About the Author Frank Morin loves good stories in every form. When not writing or trying to keep up with his active family, he's often found hiking, camping, Scuba diving, or traveling to research new books. Frank lives in Oregon with his lovely wife and four kids, who are all brutal critics, but die-hard fans. For updates on his sci-fi time travel thrillers, his popular YA fantasy novels, or other upcoming book releases, check his website: www.frankmorin.org
